Dear Parents and Well Wishers,
Greetings!

The holiday season is here!! A time to celebrate festivals with family and friends; a time to make travel plans to explore the world or unwind at a short getaway closer home.

This season of festivals and travel can be an equally enriching experience for children. Learning about one's culture, bonding with extended family members instil in them a larger sense of belongingness and a feeling of pride for their country and its rich tradition. Their ability to include more people into their otherwise small world - aiding tolerance and acceptance of each other - is a skill that children learn in the process; thus helping in their social and emotional development.

Travelling widens a child's perspective opening them to a whole new world of adventure and exploration tickling their curiosities and senses. It makes them more adaptable to different cultures and helps them visualize matters at a global level. Observation skills and their ability to appreciate things around them greatly increase during the journey.

Holidays could also be a time when children learn a new skill, discover a new interest or hobby. It also brings out the story teller in them as they relive experiences with family and friends.

A well- planned, well-spent holiday can lend to beautiful memories, rejuvenate and help each one to get back to normal routines with added vigour, positivity, and a brighter outlook.

Wishing you all a very happy holiday and festive season.

Happy Dussehra!
