

January 2019

Dear Parents and Well Wishers, Greetings!

Being true to oneself at all times irrespective of the circumstances; taking the path of righteousness inspite being the only one is a test of character that relates to the values being upheld by an individual.

Values are important. The values we uphold are the ones that define our character, our attitude towards life. It helps us to take decisions and subtly directs our course of life. When we use our values to make decisions, we make a deliberate choice to focus on what is important to us. And when values are shared, they build internal cohesion in a group.

The set of values that one holds may not be the same and will differ from person to person, family to family and hence reflects in the choices that they make.

The values we instill in our children will help them face the challenges of the real world with grace and confidence as they grow up. Values guide the children to see what's important to them, find their motivation to do just about anything in life. How can we instill the values in our children? Talk to them. When they go the wrong way, intervene and guide them, motivate them, ensure that you convey the message clearly- both in your actions and speech.

The vices of the world are like the demons who will constantly lure us away from the path of righteousness. It is important that we consciously remind ourselves of the values that we strongly believe in.

to make decisions when you know what your values are”*
